

FOREIGN GOSSIP.

Gen. von Hartmann of the Bavarian army served 10 years in the French army, under Napoleon, says the Paris Figaro.

Timothy Truman, the once famous editor of the Petit Journal, the most largely circulated paper in Paris, has had a daily sale of over 600,000 copies, recently died in the French capital. He was one of the best-known writers in Paris, and was reported to have made acquaintance with all kinds of gossip than any man in France.

It is reported of the Count de Paris, the Oriental candidate for the throne of France, that, while walking with his wife on the boulevards of Paris, a dozen ladies in succession were called for their use; but the drivers, incensing them to be country folk, who were wont to haggle, refused to stop, and the couple were forced to剽窃 house on foot.

The Sunday schools of London don't seem to impress Americans very favorably. A clergyman writes recently: "London has what it calls Sunday schools, but they are generally only a milder form of instruction. The school of Dr. Cunningham's church was absent, and the schoolroom is a despatch. The seats are not arranged in rows, nor is there any kind of discipline. The teacher, however, is a good man, and the pupils are well educated."

The managers of the China Submarine Telegraph Company have solved the somewhat difficult problem of how to transmit telegraphic messages in Chinese. The plan adopted is this: Some few thousand wooden blocks, all of the same type, and of the size of a fist, are numbered out in the same way. A-fat having handed in his message written in Chinese, the native clerk selects in order the correct blocks from the case, and puts them in a row on a board. These are then sent to English colleagues, who telegraph the numbers to the destination desired. Here the reverse process is gone through, and the letters having been taken from the case, the characters are stamped on paper. Thus A-fat put in the Chinese characters he wished of A-fat put in the medium of his native language.
